State Education Board in Future to Be Appointive

Present Board Unchanged, and Members Will Complete Their Terms

TEACHER PENSIONS

Teachers Will Pay in 4% of Salary, and State Will Match It

Editor's Note—This is another in a series of articles reviewing legislation enacted at the recent session of the Arkansas General Assembly. Others in the series will follow daily.

By ED L. CAMPBELL

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Three major changes in the Arkansas public school system were ordered by the 1937 Legislature.

Free textbooks will be supplied children in the first eight grades of the common schools beginning with the 1937-38 school year.

Teachers will begin to build a retirement fund through contribution of 4 per cent of their salaries, matched equally by state funds.

The state board of education will become appointive instead of elective.

The legislature appropriated $1,000,000 to be spent in launching the free textbook program during the next biennium. Thereafter, the system will be maintained by a $250,000 annual share in sales tax revenues.

County examiners will go on a full-time basis to handle the new venture.

Teachers' Pensions

The teachers' pension system will enable veteran instructors to retire at the age of 60. Its sponsor, Sen. Richard R. Thompson of Eureka Springs, said it would bring social security to the "most underpaid profession in Arkansas."

The present state board of education was not abolished by the new law, but hereafter as its members complete their seven-year terms, successors will be appointed by the governor. Formerly one member was elected at each annual school election.

The only other important school measure enacted at the recent session placed the annual school enumeration in the hands of the state department of education instead of local districts, tightened regulations governing this process, upon which distribution of state school funds is based.

Institutions of higher education were not materially affected by any legislation but the state school for the blind at Little Rock will be given new quarters. The present school property is to be sold and a new building erected adjacent to the state deaf school.

Convents cannot be threatened with unwarranted invasion of their property by now. The legislature repealed a 1915 statute which permitted any person to demand and conduct an inspection of these institutions.

Police Pensions

Cities with 16,000 or greater population will be able to set up police pension systems under one of the few laws passed pertaining strictly to municipalities.

Other new laws affecting cities give them the right to establish housing authorities for the purpose of slum clearance, allow the municipalities a share in the county three mill road tax, enable street improvement districts to refund obligations against which judgments have been rendered, and authorize bond issues to repair or refinance municipal utility plants.

Cities having municipal utilities may use revenue from such plants for the retirement of street improvement bonds. Cities of the second class and incorporated towns may now levy privilege taxes on liquor stores.

Local Legislation

Local legislation, such as, is unconstitutional in Arkansas. But every legislature accomplishes the desired purpose of covering local situations with "general" laws. Among local problems handled by the 1937 legislature were:

Repeal of a law prohibiting pool playing in Calhoun county.

Gift of state land to a group of Mena citizens in settlement of an old state obligation.

Discharge of two deputy jailers at the Sebastian county jail in Fort Smith.

Arrangement for paying employees of Pulaski county twice a month.

Elimination of a five-cent toll on telephone calls between Fort Smith and Van Buren.

2 Easter Services for M. E. Church

Dramatic Program Night of 21st—Musical Service Night of 28th

The special Easter worship program at First Methodist church will consist of two services—a dramatic and a musical service.

The dramatic service will be given Sunday night, March 21 at 7:30 when an Easter play, "For He Had Great Possessions" will be presented by a group of young adults of the church.

Easter Sunday night, the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Ralph Rounton, will present a service of worship in Easter music, which will consist of tuneful and enjoyable melodies, carrying the theme of the Resurrection.

Easter Sunday morning the choir will give special numbers at the morning worship.

In the Easter play to be given this Sunday night, the congregation will find an intensely vivid and deeply-felt conviction of the power and beauty of Christ's teaching and life, skillfully brought out in a play of the most unusual dramatic merit.

The cast of characters of this play, which is being directed by Mrs. Lawrence Martin, is as follows:

Ben Azel—a rich young merchant—Lawrence Martin.

Johanan—His friend—Marshall Bailey.

Zakkai—chief tax collector of Jericho—Jimmie Jones.

Nason—steward of Ben Azel—Steven Bader.

Bar Timaeus—a blind man—G. B. Martin.

Asenath—wife of Ben Azel—Mrs. Lawrence Martin.

Hadassah—daughter of Bar Timaeus—Mary Louise Keith.

Leah—handmaid of Asenath—Mina May Milburn.

Miriam—handmaid of Asenath—Miss Guila Bayce.

Azor—Son of Ben Azel and Asenath—Glenn Williams, Jr.

The public is invited to attend this dramatic service of worship.

Mussolini Gives British Challenge

Italian Dictator Addresses 100,000 in African Colony, Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya, Africa.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, referring scathingly to British nervousness over Italy's ascendancy in the Mediterranean, told a cheering throng of 100,000 Wednesday that the Italian empire had been forced to re-arm to meet the re-armament threat of others.

The premier delivered the speech on his first visit to this Italian colony on the southern shore of the Mediterranean in 10 years.

College Course Is Offered CCC Boys

Enrollment in Jonesboro State Open to All Arkansas Camps

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Major G. C. Graham, district commander of the Civilian Conservation Corps here, announced Tuesday a plan under which Arkansas CCC enrollees may acquire a college education at Arkansas State Teachers College, Jonesboro, while serving their enlistment.

He said that arrangements were being worked out with Arkansas State authorities to put the plan into effect at the beginning of the new enlistment period, April 1. The only cost to the enrollee will be a small matriculation fee.

It will be possible for as many as 86 boys to attend the college at one time Major Graham reported. This is the quota for the Jonesboro camp.

Enrollees from every camp in the state who meet certain qualifications may become eligible to enter the school.

The commander of each will select two outstanding students at the end of each six months enrollment period. Vacancies at the Jonesboro camp will be filled from the list. There will be about 25 vacancies there April 1 Major Graham reported.

The college work will not interfere with the camp activities of the enrollees, since they will attend the night sessions, Graham said. The CCC camp at Jonesboro is located within walking distance of the Arkansas State campus.

Burr Store Is to Reopen on Friday

Store Relocated in Former Scott Building, Fully Remodeled

Formal reopening of the Burr Store, West Second street, will be held at 9 a. m. Friday. The new Burr location is in the building formerly occupied by Scott Store.

The Burr store has been remodeled, new fixtures have been installed and all departments have been restocked with new spring merchandise, F. L. Luthans, local manager said Wednesday.

During pre-opening days the store has undergone a complete change. Modern inset wall cases have been installed, giving additional space to the building. Open display of merchandise with the use of modern display tables is another feature.

The interior and exterior of the building has been repainted and remodeled.

For the opening day event, prices have been reduced on a great number of articles. Approximately 20 to 25 sales clerks besides the regular staff will be employed.

Assisting Mr. Luthans preliminary to reopening the store have been H. T. Phipps, of Dallas, F. J. McGuinness of Dallas, G. A. Fike of Batesville, J. E. Howell of Pauls Valley, Okla.

The regular staff of the new store will be:

F. L. Luthans, manager; Elvis Howell, assistant manager and in charge of men's department; Miss Floy Mae Russell, office assistant; Mrs. Cue Adams, piece goods; Mrs. Frank Russell, ready-to-wear and millinery; Miss Ethel Turner, hosiery, lingerie and infants' wear; Miss Annie Sue Andrews, Connie Parsons and Mrs. Dolcie Middlebrooks, clerks.

Nominating—J. E. Landers, Lewisville; E. C. Benton, Fordyce.

Legislator—Thos. C. McRae, Jr., Prescott; C. Daniel, Monticello, and Garland Hunt, Camden.

Insurance Contest Winners Chosen

Mrs. B. C. Hyatt and Alvin Pitt "Lloyds of London" Winners

Some 200 letters were received at the Star office when the "How, What and Where did Insurance Originate" contest came to a close Monday night. The contest tied in with Saenger's "Lloyds of London" picture showing there Thursday and Friday. Some very interesting facts about insurance were brought to light, especially the fact that it started some 4000 years ago.

As the Greening Insurance Agency and Roy Anderson were the sole judges, and had so many letters to go over, it took up to a few minutes to press time to decide the first two cash prize awards. Winners of the two cash tickets each will be mailed, and the two cash prize winners may call at the Saenger manager's office for their prizes.

First prize of $250 went to Mrs. B. C. Hyatt and second prize of $100 to Alvin M. Pitt, both of Hope.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Reading from left to right, it begins to look like a great season for pants makers and chain manufacturers when all these sit-down strikes end. Steel mills didn't do much dallying. They just raised the pay of their workers and then passed the cost on to razor blade users. Mayor LaGuardia of New York issued Germany and they came right back and called him another one. So we had to apologize to Germany and Germany apologized to us. That makes two countries look silly for something they were not responsible for.

PTA Is to Sponsor New Theater Film

Will Sell Tickets for "The Harvester," Showing Thursday, Friday

The Paisley Parent-Teachers Association will sponsor "The Harvester," feature picture showing Thursday and Friday at the New Theater, South Elm street.

Tickets went on sale Wednesday. They can be purchased at all schools, from any member of the Paisley P. T. A. or from students who will canvass the downtown area.

Part of the proceeds from four performances, matinee and night Thursday and Friday, will go to the library fund of the Paisley school.

The student selling the most tickets will be given a two-week pass to the New Theater.

"The Harvester" is from the novel by Gene Stratton Porter.

Extension of City Power Lines, Junk Yard, Council Topic

Roy Stephenson and Others Petition for Rural Electrification

PROTEST NUISANCE

Presbyterian Delegation Appear Against Present Junyard Location

Launching of a proposed rural electrification project, and the abolition of a junk yard on East Second street, were the main topics discussed before the city council Tuesday night.

Roy Stephenson, appearing before the council as spokesman for a half dozen landowners, asked that the municipal light plant extend its lines farther into the country to furnish electricity to farm homes and to persons who "want to build homes outside of the present city limits."

"Rural electrification, gentlemen, is not only coming to farm homes of Hempstead county—it is actually here in some sections and within a short time it will spread to the majority of homes throughout the rural vicinity," Mr. Stephenson declared.

Need Suburban Line He pointed to a half dozen persons who he said were anxious to start construction of new and modern homes on Highway 67 east of Hope, but these homes will not be complete without electricity, he said.

"Unless the City of Hope with its municipal plant meets the growing demand for electricity, then some other utility plant or corporation will do so," Mr. Stephenson said in an interview with The Star Wednesday.

Mr. Stephenson cited the cases of Fulton and DeAnn communities which are being served by outside utility companies.

After a long discussion, the council Tuesday night agreed to send Mayor Albert Graves and Alderman Carter Johnson to Little Rock to appear before the Arkansas Utilities Commission to ascertain legal requirements that a municipal plant might have to meet in extending its lights to rural sections.

A delegation of property owners and members of the First Presbyterian church, headed by the Rev. Thomas Brewster, appeared before the council and protested against the operation of a junkyard on East Second street, near the church. The junkyard is operated by P. A. Lewis.

The Rev. Mr. Brewster said: "Gentlemen, I come before you with no bitterness in my heart toward any one. I represent the church, a group of its members and officers and property owners near the church."

"I am here to ask the removal of the P. A. Lewis junkyard. The junkyard is a menace to public health, it is a eyesore to the residential section, the noise is distracting and the odor is simply awful."

"In the past workmen have disturbed public worship at the Presbyterian church."

Deaton was brought to Hope and lodged in jail. He was released Wednesday on bond for his appearance in municipal court next Monday.

The incident Tuesday night caused Sheriff Jim Bearden to issue a warning that it was a violation of the law to leave vehicles parked on a public highway. He said violators would be arrested and prosecuted.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usages by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. May one go from his berth to the dressing room of the Pullman in dressing gown and slippers?

2. May a young woman let a man, who she knows, pay for her meal in a dining-car, if they happen to be on a short trip together?

3. Is it customary to leave word with the maid in a hotel as to the hour one wishes to be awakened?

4. Should one write his street address on a hotel register?

5. In an American play hotel what is the customary weekly tip to the waitress?

What would you do—
You are a woman making a day's journey by car with a man; due to car trouble you find that you will have to stay over night in a town where you have friends.

(a) Explain the situation to your friends and ask them to take you in?

(b) Both of you stay at the same hotel?

(c) Go to different hotels?

Answers
1. Yes.
2. Yes.
3. No, leave word with the telephone or desk clerk.
4. No.
5. Five per cent of the cost of board. It would be less for a family.

Best "What Would You Do" solution—Either (a) or (c) would be all right. (a) would save you from any gossip that might arise.

Two Crashes Narrowly Avoided—Protests Filed With Officers

A stalled truck on the highway at night—and no lights—caused a commotion Tuesday night when two automobiles loaded with Hope residents came upon the vehicle just west of Emmet on paved Highway 67.

Crashes were narrowly averted. Investigation Wednesday showed that a negro was the driver of the truck, which had been re-possessed by Hope Auto company.

The truck was headed toward Hope, but for some cause the engine had gone "dead." The negro left it on the highway and went to reach a telephone to summon help in bringing the truck to Hope.

While the matter was reported to Hope officers, who went to the scene and arrested Guy Deaton, white man of Emmet for drunkenness, it developed that Deaton had no connection with the truck, but happened to be near it when the officers arrested him.

Deaton was brought to Hope and lodged in jail. He was released Wednesday on bond for his appearance in municipal court next Monday.

The incident Tuesday night caused Sheriff Jim Bearden to issue a warning that it was a violation of the law to leave vehicles parked on a public highway. He said violators would be arrested and prosecuted.

Million Bushels of Peaches Likely

Total Frost Damage All Spring Less Than 25% in Nashville Area

Total damage from frost this spring in the Nashville peach orchards amounts to less than 25 per cent, an official statement through Martin Walsh, secretary of Nashville Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday.

"The trees now are almost all in full bloom and indications are that producers may expect a very good crop if nothing unprecedented happens, and at this late date it is not expected that anything will occur to change this estimate very materially," Mr. Walsh said.

"The blossoms are a beautiful sight and should be seen by everyone who can come. The peach crop, it is now estimated, will be about a million bushels."

Rebel Guns Pound Away at Madrid

Seek Reprisals for Destructive Government Aerial Attacks

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Insurgent artillery scored direct hits in the center of Madrid Wednesday in one of the stiffest bombardments of the war.

The barrage was believed to be in reprisal for destructive air raids by massed government fleets behind the insurgent's Guadalajara lines.

Federals said a government armada of 25 bi-motored bombers and 60 pursuit planes virtually demolished the insurgent-held towns of Sigüenza and Brihuega, northeast of Madrid.

Sit-Downers Ignore Deadline on Court Evacuation Order

STREETS BLOCKED

Huge Mass of Union Sympathizers Surrounds Detroit Factories

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—More than 5,000 sit-down strikers defied a court injunction against their occupancy of the Chrysler corporation's automobile plants Wednesday.

Their leaders declined to meet with a committee named by Governor Frank Murphy to seek a solution of labor disputes.

An hour after the deadline set for the strikers' evacuation had passed, union sympathizers estimated to number 10,000 surrounded Chrysler's Jefferson avenue plant, blocking traffic for five blocks.

Nearly as many surrounded the huge Dodge division plant, ordinarily employing 25,000 workers, where strikers hung out a sign "Give us liberty or give us death!"

May Ask Justices to Talk of Court

McReynolds' Own Speech Revives Notion of Going Direct to Judges

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Justice McReynolds' criticism of those who complain about adverse court decisions revived talk Wednesday of asking the supreme court justices to give their views on President Roosevelt's court reorganization proposals.

Such a possibility developed just before Professor Edward S. Corwin of Princeton told the senate judiciary committee that a majority of the supreme court justices had "forgotten their supreme obligation" to interpret the constitution as a broad document written for "the undefined future."

Justice McReynolds' Speech Justice McReynolds of the United States Supreme Court told a small, intimate audience Tuesday night that the "evidence of good sportsmanship" was to accept the outcome of a "fair trial." For the first time since President Roosevelt submitted his proposal to reorganize the court, a member of that body expressed some of his own views on the relationship of the court to the government.

McReynolds, speaking extemporaneously at a banquet of Phi Kappa Phi fraternity, declared:

"I have taken an oath to do justice to the best of my ability, to do justice to rich and poor alike. That obligation I try not to forget. I try to protect the backwoodsman in the hills of Georgia as well as the man of wealth in a mansion on Fifth avenue. And I have the same obligation to the man in the mansion on Fifth avenue as to the humblest man on any walk of life."

Without referring directly to administration cases before the court in the last four years, Justice McReynolds said it sometimes was the practice of attorneys, after losing a case, to complain of the unfairness of the court.

"But the evidence of good sportsmanship," he said, "is that a man who has had a chance to present a fair case to a fair tribunal must be a good sport and accept the outcome."

He preceded his plea for sportsmanship in accepting rulings of the court by commenting:

"To be a judge is not a pleasant task. May I remind you that you have the most complicated, government since the beginning of time. It is a piece of machinery so difficult to operate that unless it can have the constant attention of upright and intelligent citizens, its continuation is not possible. To manage all its divergent interests and to do it intelligently from Washington is impossible. The man who can do it has not been born."

"Courts only decide things that are submitted to them," the justice continued, "and only things that are in dispute come before them. Thousands and thousands of things come before them that are settled to the general satisfaction. If things come that are not settled to the satisfaction of all, put yourself in the place of the court and see if you could have done better."

He paused momentarily, then said:

"I should like to be optimistic. I should like to tell you that the situation is rosy. I can't. But I like to believe in the courage of the American people, and I hope they may make a solution of which they may be proud."

Pasteur Treatment Is Successful in Most Cases of Hydrophobia

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

(No. 163)
 Hydrophobia still exists throughout most of the world. It was even re-introduced into England during the World War because of animals brought in by airplane.
 To banish hydrophobia, we first must prevent it from affecting persons who have been bitten and, second, we must try to eliminate the disease from communities.
 When a person has been bitten by an animal, and there is any possibility of hydrophobia, it is customary to treat the bite at once by cauterization with strong acid. The wound sometimes is laid open with a knife to make certain the acid will penetrate thoroughly.
 Then the Pasteur treatment is given. During this treatment, the patient may go about his usual business, and does not have to stay in bed. He should, however, avoid cold, excitement, fatigue, or anything else that might tend to lessen his resistance.
 Any one who has been bitten by a dog should, if there is the slightest possibility of hydrophobia, take this preventive treatment. If it is quite certain that the dog is mad, or if the animal shows any symptoms suggestive of hydrophobia, the treatment should be started immediately.
 If doubt exists that the dog is mad, it is kept under observation for 14 days and carefully watched for signs of rabies. If the dog does not, in that time, develop any symptoms, it is probably unnecessary for the victim to take the Pasteur treatment. Far too often, unfortunately, the animal is destroyed and no attempts are made to examine its brain to see if there is any sign of rabies. In some cases it is impossible to catch the animal which has done the biting. In such instances, the victim should take the treatment to be certain he is not infected.
 Because of the great danger of hydrophobia, everything possible should be done to prevent its spread. At times when hydrophobia is prevalent in a community, both dogs and children may be safeguarded by protecting them from exposure to the bites of mad animals.
 Homeless dogs should be picked up and disposed of by the usual methods. A pet that is kept in a good home, watched carefully, and kept from contact with strange dogs is not so likely to be bitten as the animal that runs free. Any dog, however, may suddenly bite a human being, with or without provocation.
 It has been said that muzzling of all dogs for two years would practically exterminate rabies. It is virtually impossible, however, to capture all ownerless dogs for muzzling. In England there once was a law demanding muzzling of all dogs and cases of hydrophobia began to diminish, but misplaced sympathy brought repeal of the law and the disease promptly reappeared.
 Vaccination of dogs against hydrophobia, suggested by Pasteur, has brought good results in various places. The method, however, is expensive, and disappointing, too, since it is not possible to vaccinate all dogs.
 The Pasteur treatment, properly and promptly administered, prevents hydrophobia from affecting a human being. In less than one-half of 1 per cent of the cases in which the Pasteur treatment is used, it is unsuccessful. Notwithstanding all the information we have about the disease, about 100 deaths from hydrophobia occur every year in the United States. Moreover, a tremendous expense is involved in applying the preventive methods in people who have been bitten.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Straight Backs Get Started in Cribs

"A flat bed and no pillow." Thus should baby begin his life, if he is to have a straight little spine, with his head set right on top, as a head should be.
 Many cribs get holes in the center, because pads and protecting covers for mattresses are tucked in under the edge, leaving a nest-like place for the baby to cuddle in, like a little bird.
 This is lovely and warm and all that, but it does not allow the rolling or turning, and besides, his backbone will be curving out in the middle just where it shouldn't be.
 A flat pillow, an inch high, won't hurt him if it is firm. But babies have a tendency to perspire around their heads and feathers are heating. Any pillow with its little cave in the center made by the weight of the head often causes ears to fold over, and later the mother will be searching for a "comforter" cap, to correct protruding ears. A too-high pillow will also throw out of line the straight continuity of spine and neck.
 Dislike Tight Beds
 Babies move quite a lot in bed, to shift position, just as we do. It is part of exercise. One reason they cry when put down is that they associate "rest" with bed, and babies cannot bear hampering.
 One feels sorry for the little thing, in such a crib, with covers fastened tightly across the body, and undies pinned as tight as pins can make them over hips and stomach.
 Every day, a well baby (not too new) may be allowed to kick without his clothes on, in a warm room with absolutely no draft. He can be laid on a wide, firm bed (care being taken that he cannot roll off), or on a thick comfort spread smoothly on the floor. The floor is best in summer.

 He will kick, and crawl, and roll and lift himself on his hands. He will find that his feet go into his mouth nicely, reach for things and stretch his muscles. Ten minutes to half an hour is enough, once a day. Of course, when he begins the creeping stage, he will get plenty of exercise.
 Don't Force Sitting Up
 The baby will learn to sit up from six months to eight or nine months of age. We must remember that there is a difference in children. Some of the healthiest are the laziest. Don't force him. When he insists on straining into a sitting position, put firm pillows around him. He will wobble forward then, and not have enough strength to hold his little backbone up. Support him for a little while this way, either with your hands or with broad sheet or towel around his body. A very few minutes of this is enough at first, until his back muscles can take it alone.
 Never force anything, either sitting up or walking. Cod liver oil and the diets of babies today make better bones and children are straighter by far than formerly, but even so, good judgment in the matter of exercise will be just that much more in his favor.
 Good posture during his growing years has its beginnings now.

 Boris Karloff: "I'm anxious to do away with the word 'horror' in connection with my roles. But hor—that is, odd or strange characterizations really are much more interesting to play."
 Director Sidney Lanfield: "Audiences are developing an appreciation of subtlety, but they still want plenty of the old flash. We had what we thought was a wow finish for 'Sing, Baby, Sing'—a shot of Menjou spouting Shakespeare into a microphone. But exhibitors who saw it said, 'Well, what you gotta have for the ending? When you gonna finish the picture?'"

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

By MARIE BLIZARD

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 DAPHNE BRETT loved LARRY SMITH, architect. Larry asked her to marry him. But Daphne had repeatedly refused because she wanted to lay aside sufficient money first to see Jennifer well launched on a career.
 Jennifer had proved the selfish young sister, defying every wish and even going so far as to try to elope with TRICKER, ALAN LEY, wealthy playboy. And then Jennifer met GORDON HERRICK, famous theater man, and seemed to have found her right work.
 One day, meanwhile, Daphne received orders from her advertising firm to make a two-months' sales tour of the country. At the same time Larry, ordered to Spain on a business trip, again asked Daphne to marry him. And Daphne refused because she needs the bonus the trip provides for Jennifer. But this she does not explain to Larry.
 Larry, of course, not knowing Daphne's real reason, decides she has chosen a career in preference to love. He says good-bye and he never returns. Daphne starts on her trip, broken-hearted. In Detroit she receives a girl friend's letter revealing Larry hadn't gone to Spain after all.
 NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XIX
 DAPHNE BRETT sat on the wingchair of her hotel room in Detroit and read and re-read that letter.
 Larry hadn't gone to Spain after all. If she had written to him before she left. If . . . if . . .
 How many times that word had come between her and her thinking only to have her realize that it all went back to one clear thing: Larry hadn't understood her, hadn't believed in her or he would not have believed that her career meant more to her than her love.
 Sometimes she couldn't believe it was true. But it was. Larry had said, "Then, this is good-bye." And it had been good-bye.
 She tried not to think of it. Yet when she fell into her hotel bed or a Pullman berth on that cross-country trek, it was only to lie in the dark and ponder on the misfortune that has withered the beauty of her love.
 ONCE her day had begun with breakfast on a train, in a hotel or in a railroad station lunch room, it was a mad scramble to assemble trunks and staff, to establish prearranged contacts with the shops showing her display. It should have made her happy to tabulate the mounting sales that meant more money for her. But she wasn't. Because the place where those things are warm is in the heart and her heart was numb.
 She had letters from Jennifer.

Brief, little notes. She had hoped before she left that Jennifer, in the excited happiness of her opening, would forgive that quarrel they had had two days before she left when Jennifer learned that Daphne had persuaded Tucker not to see her. Apparently she hadn't. Her notes were curt and merely passed on news about the apartment, the maid and the show. Apple Blossoms had opened in Philadelphia and gone right into New York, rather disappointing, since the Philadelphia critics had been enthusiastic about it. The New York critics hadn't been but the house was well sold and they had been running six weeks. It looked as though it would carry through the season.
 DAPHNE was glad for Jennifer. Glad that one of the critics had noted the performance of "a newcomer who appears to be adaptable and has a fresh beauty in recent seasons."
 Daphne wrote an encouraging note to Jennifer and applied her self to the problem of collecting trunks accidentally left in Duluth, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Kansas City, Back to Chicago. Later to Detroit. Still later, Oklahoma City, Salt Lake City. Finally, Seattle and San Francisco and three months after she had left—it was now the end of November—the tour was over and Daphne was on her way home.
 "Please meet me," she wrote Anne. "I feel horribly lonesome suddenly. Trip has been a success I think but now I'm itching to be home. Only I don't want to arrive all by myself. I've asked Jennifer but I'm afraid she'll be at the theater."
 Jennifer was not at the theater because Daphne's train arrived at Grand Central in mid-morning. Jennifer was waiting for her. Jennifer in a green suit with a great collar and muff of cross fox.
 "I had to do it, Daphne. If an actress doesn't dress, she gets nowhere. I suppose you know the show closed?"
 "Did it?" Daphne asked as though Jennifer had said "the lights went out." Not at all important.
 "Yes, but I'm not worried. Herzberg seems to be impressed by me. He keeps in touch with me and he has a new play I'm really intrigued with. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he offered me the lead."

She had letters from Jennifer.

Light Jackets New Note for Fashion

Navy Blue Skirts Jacketed With Yellow Tweed or Fuchsia Cheviot

By ALICE MAXWELL

PARIS.—(AP)—Light jackets and dark skirts are the newest note in Paris spring suit combinations.
 Navy blue skirts are jacketed in yellow tweed or fuchsia cheviot. A black cloque skirt printed with white dots is stopped by a white swagger coat splattered with black dots. One black afternoon model has a white grosgrain belero. Another has a bright green bolero trimmed with black braid curlycues.
 Two shades of green flannel are used in the jacket and skirt of a sports tailleur. Cornflower and powder-blue lines with a chevron pattern combine in another.
 In fact, there's no end to what style and color zwaids can do with suits this season.
 Plaids and checks figure with plain fabrics in new 1937 partnerships. Magenta purple and light blue make a plaid pattern for a tulle jacket and a light blue soft wool fashions the skirt. The blouse and hat worn with this are light blue.
 A thin pink wool scarf and blouse do brave accessory duty with a bias-checked wool skirt in pink and green which is topped with a plain green jacket.
 Light grey checked jackets and dark grey plain skirts make smart tailored combinations. (One grey outfit is accented by a bunch of tiny lemons on the jacket lapel and a sweater blouse in lemon yellow wool.)
 The fabrics used in spring suits created by both French and American designers are, for the most part, comparatively plain wools of the worsted and simple tweed types. Plaids and the chic new pencil-striped patterns with white stripes on grey, beige or cinnamon backgrounds are also popular.

my money because they're likely to catch on to me any time now. Haven't had any fun since I left the chorus; those were the irresponsible, joyous days."
 Freddie Bartholomew: "I'm afraid I shall have to be an actor when I grow up because, you see, I haven't had any other sort of training."
 Writer Harold Buchman: "A gag man is a guy who scratches a platitude until it pokes like an epigram."
 Director Frank Capra: "There's a lot of talk about Academy awards for the best performances of the year. But more honor ought to be paid to supporting players—the seasoned actors and actresses in secondary roles who day after day contribute skillful work to the pictures in which stars are made."
 Famous Leading Man, making out his income tax report: "I wish the government could learn to live within my salary."

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

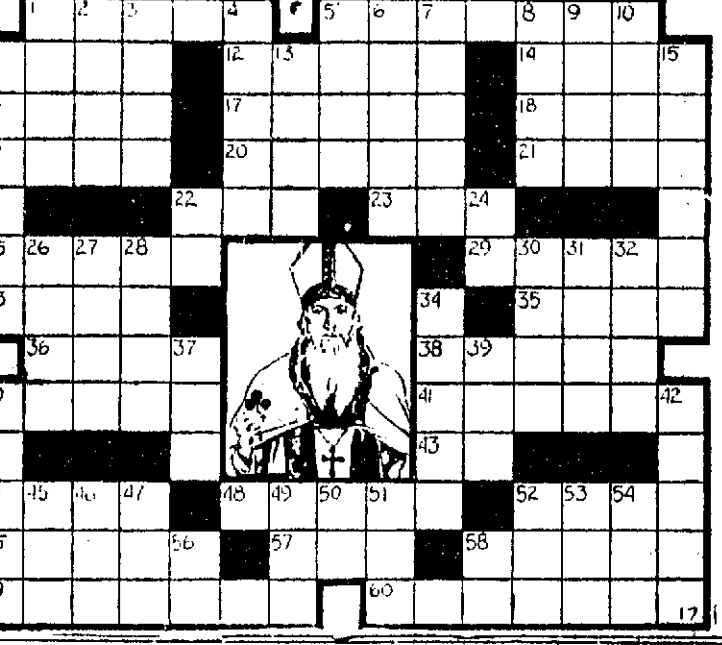

A Gripping Story of History's Spies.
 The spy is one of the oldest and most sinister creatures on earth. He has existed almost from the dawn of history, he has upheld the law of the tyrant in history, and he has played a part in every war, revolution, and campaign of oppression that has stained mankind's annals. So it is time somebody wrote his biography.
 Someone has done it, too—Richard Wilmer Rowan, who has produced "The Story of Secret Service" (Doubleday, Doran; $3.50), a sardonic, informative, and amazingly interesting account of some 35 centuries of double-dealing.
 "However deeply rooted and inherent the government trait of secret service," remarks Mr. Rowan, "no thoroughly respectable world would tolerate it; and when the millennium comes, he adds, we shall recognize it by the fact that it contains no spies and no secret police."
 His book is an astonishingly complete. It goes back to the days of the ancient Egyptians and Romans, and comes down through the World War, and as far as I can see, it misses nobody along the way.
 Here you will find famous spies and obscure ones, from that incredible Russian double-crosser, Azzaf, to the Austrian Redl, who helped his country to lose the World War. Fouché is here; and the grimly efficient Prussian, Sielher; and "Crazy Bet," the eccentric Richmond Lacy, who spied on the Confederates through four years of the Civil War.
 Spying, Mr. Rowan remarks, hasn't changed much through the ages. It is mostly a matter of corruption and chicanery, and it is a sure reflection of the degeneration of government. Spying at its worst—through the tyrannical "political police" systems—seems to be more prevalent now than ever before. And that fact, says the author, is a dreary indication of the dark state the world has reached.

GOOD GARDENING

Plants Must Be Fed Well to Grow
 By DONALD GRAY
 NEA Gardening Consultant
 Animal and poultry manure is considered the ideal fertilizer, but it is not always available to the average small home owner. Hence the reason for the numerous chemical fertilizers on the market.
 Superphosphate, ammonium sulphate, nitrate of soda, and bonemeal are sold as commercial compounds. Commercial fertilizers are sold under different trade names and contain different combinations of soluble plant foods.
 There is no one complete fertilizer that will supply the necessary plant food for shrubs, trees, grass, flowers and vegetables. Each one needs more of one element than another.
 There are three main elements important to plant life: Nitrogen, which makes for leaf growth; phosphorus, which promotes flowers and seeds, and potash, which makes for root growth. It is useless to apply a fertilizer high in nitrogen to a vegetable, like turnip, that needs mostly potash.
 Commercial fertilizers are made up of various combinations of plant foods. Here is an analysis of some of the trade named fertilizers available:
 Vigoro and Old Gardener analyze 4 per cent nitrogen, 12 per cent phosphoric acid and 4 per cent potash. This, in short represents the fertilizers in the 4-12-4 class.
 Luna has an analysis of 5-10-4. Turf Builder 10-6-4. Triple X 10-6-4. Armort's Lawn and Garden Fertilizer 4-8-6, and G. & O. 5-8-5.
 The fertilizer usually is marked up to what plants or crops it is best suited for, and its producers are required by law to show its chemical analysis.
 Commercial fertilizers can be used before planting, or after the crop is started. The frequency and rate of application of any fertilizer depends to some extent upon its content of soluble nitrogen. The greater the quantity of soluble nitrogen in the fertilizer, the more frequent should be the applications, and the less should be the quantity applied each time.
 Every garden has a certain amount of refuse, such as grass cuttings, weeds and leaves. Heaped together, they decompose and become humus, with the elements found in manure. Every garden should have a compost pile to be used whenever soil is needed to feed plants or to make the ground friable.
 Woodashes have some fertilizing quality while coal ashes have practically none. The latter is good to break up heavy soils and help to retain moisture in sandy soils.
 Bonemeal comes in and goes out of favor. At present most authorities claim it is good mostly as a slow acting fertilizer, chiefly useful for its phosphoric acid content.
 Here are recommendations for feeding different plants:
 Annual Flowers: Fertilize in the spring after planting, with superphosphate, using 10 pounds per 100 square feet, or commercial fertilizer containing 4-12-4, four pounds to 100 square feet, or 15-30-15, using one pound to 100 square feet, or 6-8-6, using four pounds to 100 square feet. Use a mulch of peat in July.
 Herbaceous Perennials: In the spring use superphosphate, 10 pounds to 100 square feet, then during the summer fertilize twice using a commercial fertilizer 4-12-4, four pounds to 100 square feet, or 15-30-15, one pound to 100 square feet, or liquid manure if not too strong a solution. Use 4 to 6 inches of manure in the fall.
 Shrubs: Animal manure, if obtainable, applied in the fall. Apply a handful of ammonium sulphate in the spring to each shrub. It will stimulate growth and make better blooms.
 Rhododendrons and Laurel: Never use bonemeal or lime. Instead, use animal manure or decayed leaves. Acidify soil by applying a handful of aluminum sulphate to each large plant.
 Wisterias: Liquid manure or nitrate of soda, one tablespoon in a gallon of water.
 Shade Trees: In April and July apply a plant food made up of 10 per cent nitrogen, 6 per cent phosphoric acid with either 3 or 4 per cent potash. Mix this fertilizer with four times its volume of garden soil, peat or shredded manure. Make holes with a crow bar at the ends of the roots 18 inches deep and 18 inches apart. Fill holes with mixture and then water.
 It takes one pound of fertilizer for each inch of tree diameter.
 NEXT: Growing vegetables that are too costly to buy.

March 17, St. Patrick's day, the day of the patron saint of Ireland. It has been said that there were no Christians in Ireland when St. Patrick began his work and no pagans when he died. This is not strictly true, but he did much to establish Christianity firmly in the island, building churches and monasteries and converting the people. Many legends grew up in Ireland about St. Patrick, such as the story of how he compelled the snakes to leave the island and the story that when some convert questioned the doctrine of Trinity, St. Patrick ended the argument by holding up a shamrock leaf, as an example of "Three in One," and the shamrock remains to this day, the emblem of Ireland, proudly worn by Irishmen the world over on St. Patrick's Day, March 17. Large shipments of shamrocks are brought to the United States for St. Patrick's Day use.

Richard Crooks to Make His First Opera Appearance of Season on Air

By RICHARD CROOKS

The Faust legend, of a man bargaining his immortal soul for the return of youth, is old—just how old nobody knows. Certainly it must date from a time soon after sensitive men, beset with the infirmities of age, began longing for the vigor of their younger years. Faust made the trade, and paid the price.

Our own world has its millions of Fausts, bitter with the realization that they have grown old, eager to pay any price to regain the years that have slipped so silently into the past. How many are there who would not give in reality what I, as Faust, do when I raise high Mephistopheles' draught and my white hair and beard and formless black robe dissolve and, again a young student, I stand brilliant and handsome in my scarlet doublet and hose?

It is easy, this illusion, once you learn to pull the rip cord at the right instant. But in real life, pulling the rip cord means paying the price. And the price is not only the tragedy of the old man thinking himself young, grasping for pleasures beyond reach and disdaining those rightfully his, but the wreckage of his own and the lives of those who love him.

It was this thought, perhaps, that moved Goethe to compose the work we shall give at the Metropolitan Opera next Saturday in the matinee performance to be heard over the National Broadcasting Company by courtesy of the Radio Corporation of America. Let me tell the story and you may judge for yourself.

It is night and Faust, old and weary of life, pores over an immense tome. Baffled by the riddle of existence and depressed with the emptiness of learning, he slams it shut and raises a cup of poison. "With this draught," he declares bitterly, "I am still master of my destiny!"

In celebration of her aunt, Mrs. Zenobia Reed's birthday anniversary, Mrs. Robert Wilson entertained with two tables of bridge on Tuesday afternoon at her home on South Elm street. The rooms were bright with spring flowers, and favors went to Mrs. J. F. Gorin and the honoree. Following the game, a most tempting salad and sandwich course was served with hot chocolate and angel food cake. Mrs. J. B. Shults of Fulton was an out of town guest. Mrs. Wilson was assisted in serving by her daughter Mary, and Mrs. O. L. Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wylie attended the Hotel Greeters meeting in Hot Springs Tuesday night.

The Friday Choral club will meet Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. C. Carlton. There will be an important call meeting of the Friday Music club at this meeting.

It costs the postoffice department between five and six million dollars to handle the mail at Christmas.

RICHARD CROOKS

repiles Faust, "I desire youth!" Very well, he shall have it for practically nothing—his soul, Faust hesitates, until Mephistopheles conjures up the vision of a beautiful and innocent maiden, then eagerly signs away his soul. He raises a goblet to his lips and immediately is transformed into a radiant and impetuous youth, elegantly clad and eager for adventure.

He soon meets up with Marguerite, whose vision he beheld, at a village celebration. Prayer book in hand, she wends her way rather timidly through the merry-makers. Faust offers to escort her, but with a touch of coyness she refuses. He stands as one transfixed and forgets his previous eagerness for the joys of the flesh.

They meet again in Marguerite's garden. Her brother, Valentine, has departed for the wars, leaving her in the protection of Marthe, a well meaning but foolish matron, who stands as one transfixed and forgets his previous eagerness for the joys of the flesh.

They meet again in Marguerite's garden. Her brother, Valentine, has departed for the wars, leaving her in the protection of Marthe, a well meaning but foolish matron, who stands as one transfixed and forgets his previous eagerness for the joys of the flesh.

In a flash the Evil One stands re-transported of ecstasy, wanders about the garden, but she refuses his advances. Mephistopheles, anxious to gain yet another soul, raises his arms and calls upon night to envelop the lovers in its voluptuous folds, and upon the flowers to quicken, with their subtle perfumes, the pulse of Marguerite. She naively plucks the petals of a daisy in the age-old game of "he loves me—he loves me not," ending with a cry of joy, "He loves me!" Faust folds her in his arms, but Marguerite is frightened by the passion he has aroused and begs him to leave her.

Mephistopheles appears and tells at Faust for letting Marguerite gain the safety of the house. He bids him wait and hear what Marguerite tells the stars. From the window of her chamber Marguerite breathes, "Haste then to return! Come!" Faust rushes to the window and elapses her in his arms. The lovers are enveloped in the blackness of night, silence broken only by the sardonic laughter of the fiend in the garden.

Marguerite is filled with shame at her betrayal, even though she and Faust are still deeply in love. She, whom all revered for her purity, is now seared at for her love affair. Valentine returns from the wars and learns of her shame and wears vengeance upon his sister's seducer. Mephistopheles, close behind Faust, sings an insulting serenade in her garden. Valentine rushes forth, but is mortally wounded in his duel with Faust. Dying, he curses the unhappy Marguerite.

Broken in mind by the tragedy of her life, Marguerite kills her child when it is born. She is condemned to die. Faust, with the help of Mephistopheles, enters the prison to urge her to escape. Her heart is filled with joy at the appearance of her lover and she sings fitfully of their first meeting. Then she notices the fiend in the shadows and prays for protection. "Marguerite!" cries Faust; but Marguerite has fallen dead. "Condemned!" gloats Mephistopheles, but he is answered by a chorus of celestial beings, "Saved!"

Railroads, Unions Agree on Pensions

Compromise Will Replace Invalidated Recent Act of Congress

WASHINGTON, (AP)—(A) — Railroads and the major rail unions agreed Tuesday night upon a 5 per cent pay roll tax to finance a retirement pension system for approximately 1,500,000 workers. Half the tax will be paid by the railroads, half by the employees.

It will replace a similarly divided 7 per cent tax provided by the present railway tax act, which the railroads blocked by a court test of its constitutionality.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executive association, and J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, joined in announcing complete agreement upon the retirement system.

The announcement came as a climax to long negotiations which resulted from an appeal by President Roosevelt, suggesting that the railway labor unions and managements confer in an effort to develop a mutually satisfactory pension arrangement.

Harrison said that, since the new plan represents an agreement, there is little likelihood of court challenge of its constitutionality. Action by congress will be necessary to put the system into effect. The announcement

Austen Chamberlain of England Dead

Famous Son of a Famous Father Succumbs at the Age of 73

LONDON, Eng. (AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, 73, famous statesman, son of a famous statesman, and father of the Locarno treaty, died Tuesday night of a heart attack in his West End London home.

One of the Conservative statesmen in the House of Commons, he was chancellor of the exchequer twice, secretary of state for foreign affairs, and secretary of state for India as well as a member of the war cabinet.

The elder son of Joseph Chamberlain, a distinguished British statesman and a half-brother of Neville Chamberlain, present chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Austen has been one of the few men in British public life who "lived down the disadvantage of being the son of a famous man."

Crowds Increase at the Tabernacle

Rev. Floyd Hawkins, Evangelist, Speaks on "The Reality of Sin"

Interesting crowds are gathering nightly at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle, North Main street, to hear the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hawkins who are in charge of the revival campaign now in progress. One of the high points of the musical program Tuesday night was a vocal duet by Mrs. Hawkins and Mrs. Webb. Special numbers and fine congregational singing feature each night's services.

The Rev. Mr. Hawkins spoke Tuesday night on, "The Reality of Sin," and at the close of the sermon when the invitation was given several responded to a call to live a Christian life. Wednesday night the evangelist is to speak on the subject of "Healing," stressing the fact that people may, in answer to prayer, even be delivered from physical sickness if proper faith is exercised in the Lord.

Thursday night's sermon has not been announced by the evangelist, but promises to be one of the most interesting messages of the entire week.

$650,000 Textbook Fund Isn't Enough

H. T. Steele Says It Will Take $900,000 to Provide Books for All

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—H. T. Steele, state textbook director, said Wednesday that the $650,000 allotted under the sales tax act for free textbook purchases during the first year of operation would not be sufficient to purchase texts.

He estimated $900,000 would be needed to place books in the first eight grades of the public schools for the opening of the term next fall.

The public is invited to hear these services nightly.

STORIES IN STAMPS
BY I. S. KLEIN

PAVED Ways for GREAT Discoveries

THREE centuries ago a Dutch mathematician and astronomer made certain discoveries that later enabled the great Sir Isaac Newton to develop some of his theories on gravity, and that made it easier for succeeding astronomers to study the heavens.

The scientist was Christian Huygens. He was first to design a pendulum clock and to use the swinging weight to determine the rate of increase in speed of a falling body.

Huygens built the first telescope of any considerable power, and with it discovered the ring around Saturn, besides one of the planet's moons. In describing these discoveries, he also revealed an invention of his own by which astronomers could measure small angles between objects seen through a telescope. Finally, Huygens proposed the wave theory of light which now is challenged by advocates of the "corpuscular" theory.

For all this Huygens was highly honored both at home and abroad. A sketch of him appears on one of Netherlands' "child welfare" stamps of 1928.

WITH DINNY GONE LAME, ALL HOPE OF RESCUING FOOZY IS GONE—REMOVESFULLY, ALLEY OOP AND HIS FRIENDS TURN BACK TO MOO...

I WISH HED STOP, FALL DOWN OR DROP DEAD! IF HE DON'T QUIT SOON, I'LL BE BOUNCED OFF ON MY HEAD!

MEANWHILE, FOOZY GRIMLY CLINGS TO THE NECK OF THE TERRIFIED CREATURE RACING ON AND ON THRU THE JUNGLE...

WASH TUBBS

WHAT! THE NEXT STOP IS EL HOYO?

HEY, FOR GOSH SAKES! EASY AND I CAN'T GO BACK TO THAT TOWN. WE GOT INTO TROUBLE THERE.

NOW, NOW, BOYS, DON'T YOU WORRY, EL HOYO'S GOT A NEW SHERIFF AND EVERYTHING'S OKAY.

COL BIG TIM SHOWS

OKAY, MY NECK! YOU DON'T KNOW LULU BELLE.

SHE'D TEAR US LIMB FROM LIMB.

HA! SO BOW WOWS RIGHT, YOU'RE AFRAID OF HER!

NOT EXACTLY. WE JUST DON'T WANT ANY TROUBLE THAT'S ALL.

HUMPH! AND WHAT IF I TOLD YOU THAT YOU'RE TO MEET THIS VERY SAME LULU BELLE IN THE BOXING RING?

I'D REFUSE TO FIGHT.

PERMIT ME TO REMIND YOU, YOUNG MAN, THAT YOU'VE SIGNED AN IRON-CLAD CONTRACT TO FIGHT ANYBODY I TELL YOU TO.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

SH... SHALL WE GO IN?

LOOK...THE GATE IS CLOSING BEHIND US! HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE IT WORKS, NUTTY?

WE PROBABLY BROKE A LIGHT RAY THAT CONTROLS THE GATE AUTOMATICALLY!

THE GATE REMAINS CLOSED AS LONG AS THE RAY IS UNBROKEN...BUT OUR BODIES PASSED THRU IT, AND ELECTRICITY DID THE REST!

MAYBE THIS SCIENTIST WON'T BE SO HARD TO SEE, AFTER ALL! HE WOULDN'T HAVE HIS GATE RIGGED UP THAT WAY IF HE WANTED TO KEEP OUT VISITORS!

THAT DOESN'T PROVE A THING! I BET THAT AUTOMATIC GATE SCARES AWAY NINETY-SEVEN PEOPLE OUT OF A HUNDRED!

AND I'M IN FAVOR OF WE THREE LEAVING RIGHT NOW AN' KEEPING THOSE FIGURES IN ROUND NUMBERS!!

MYRA NORTH, SPECIAL NURSE

OUR SITUATION IS THIS, MYRA—IF THAT SERGEANT REPORTS US TO THE LOYALTY INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT, 'THE CLAW' IS CERTAIN TO BE ON OUR TRAIL WITHOUT DELAY...AND THEN OUR CHANCES OF SAVING LANE WILL BE PRACTICALLY NIL!

PERHAPS WE HAD BETTER SEPARATE. I COULD GO TO THE HOSPITAL AND VOLUNTEER AS A NURSE. I'D BE CERTAIN TO PICK UP SOME USEFUL INFORMATION FROM THE WOUNDED MEN, AND YOU COULD CONTACT ME THERE, EVERY DAY.

A SLENDID SUGGESTION, MYRA—BUT YOU MUST WATCH OUT FOR 'THE CLAW'—HE'S DIABOLICALLY CLEVER, AND...

CAREFUL—SOMEONE'S APPROACHING OUR TABLE!

A MESSAGE FOR YOU, SIR... 'UNDER THE ROSE'!

FOR ME?

OUT OUR WAY

C'MON ICK, GIT ANOTHER ROPE ON THIS BABY AN' WE'LL HAVE SOME FUN WITH HIM.

OH, YO GO RIGHT AHAID! YO KIN HAB MO FUN WIF ONE ROPE ON 'IM.

UNSELFISHNESS.

It's an Ill Wind!

IS AUNT PENNY IN THE LIVING ROOM, NOW? I THINK I'LL CALL HER

OH NO, MAM—DON'T DO DAT! SOMETIMES AH FIGGAH HER BEIN' HEAR AM A BLESSIN'

Y'SEE, MISS BOOTS AM DATIN' MISTAH BOB DIS EVENIN'—AN' ANYTHING DAT'LL KEEP DEM TWO SEPARATED, HAS ITS GOOD POINTS

Jessup Breaks the News

THIS CRAZY LIZARD MUST BE THREE QUARTERS KANGAROO! IF I CAN STICK, I'M TH' BEST DANG BUSTER IN ALL OF MOO!

OH, MY GOSH, THIS CRITTER IS FAST AN' STOUT! I WONDER HOW LONG HIS LEGS ARE GONNA HOLD OUT?

Brace Up, Oscar!

NOT EXACTLY. WE JUST DON'T WANT ANY TROUBLE THAT'S ALL.
